

Successes and Challenges in Building an Assessment Culture Across CUNY (Part 1): Case Study of Academic Assessment at John Jay

This program is the first in a two-part series on the successes and challenges of building an assessment culture, from both case study and cross-campus perspectives. Scheduled sessions for Part 1:

- John Jay faculty reflecting on the completion of their first five-year cycle of student learning assessment;
- A discussion of the role of the Assessment Committee in promoting a culture of assessment;
- An interactive session on the new expectations featured in the Excellence in Assessment Designation; and
- A look ahead as assessment assumes greater importance for institutional planning, resource allocation, and accreditation.
