No Direction Home: Labor Rights and Geospatial Data
June 1, 2021 Webinar, 11 am NY, 4 pm London, and 11 pm Beijing

This webinar will focus on issues surrounding the use of geospatial data and labor rights, domestically and internationally. It will examine the use of geospatial technologies and data by employers, and their impact on the human rights of workers under international and domestic laws and protocols.

	Dr. Jenny Chan, Assistant Professor of Sociology at The Hong Kong Polytechnic University "Buy with 1-Click: Independent Contractors in China's Last-Mile Delivery"
	Dr. Christina J. Colclough, Founder, the Why Not Lab "In Defense of the Right to be Human – Why Workers Need Much Stronger Collective Data Rights"
	Dr. Dragana Kaurin, Executive Director, Localization Lab "Tracking People and Movement: Use of Geospatial Data in Workplace Immigration Raids"
	Dr. Ariana Levinson, Law Professor, University of Louisville Brandeis School of Law. "Workers' Rights, Legislation, and Creative Litigation"

The webinar will be co-moderated by Dr. Richard P. Appelbaum, Professor, Fielding Graduate University and Distinguished Research Professor Emeritus, University of California, Santa Barbara and William A. Herbert, Distinguished Lecturer, Hunter College, City University of New York and Faculty Associate at the Roosevelt House Public Policy Institute.