DEPARTMENT OF ART & ART HISTORY
Hunter College, CUNY

Rationale:

ARTLA 10100 Introduction to Visual Experience was established as the Studio Art program's introductory course over four decades ago. It no longer fulfills the department's need for a rigorous approach to the fundamentals of an ongoing artistic practice and a shared vocabulary that students need to draw on as they move through the major. Moreover, the long-standing requirement for ARTLA 10100 that students attend two 3-hour classes taught by different faculty members, each operating independently while receiving credit for only one, is no longer tenable, and impedes our students' paths to graduation. Thus, we have moved to replace it.

ARTLA 20100 is designed specifically to serve as a prerequisite to all of our courses at the 200 level and above, strengthening the preparedness of students in the 24- and 42-credit Studio Art majors. The new course is intended to provide a coherent introduction to the language, themes, and practices of contemporary art making, familiarizing students with a shared set of fundamental terms and concepts for artistic practice across a variety of studio art concentrations. While each section of ARTLA 20100 will pose its questions and assignments in a different artistic medium, every section of the course will share a commitment to drawing, reading, and writing, and a broad background glossary and bibliography, as well as a set of central concepts.
